A number of groups and individuals were consulted in the preparation of this statistical profile. The principal targets for consultations were government departments, and youth organizations. Various representatives identified variables that they felt would assist in doing statistical analysis. The areas highlighted in this statistical profile reflect the priorities expressed during the consultation process.

We would like to thank all of these people for helping us to define what is lacking or necessary when developing the indicators that affects the lives of young people. In particular we wish to acknowledge the generous support of the Census and Statistics Department, in particular, General Household Survey Section, in providing access to data as well as valuable advice and assistance.

Finally, we would especially like to express our appreciation to the Social Sciences Research Centre of the University of Hong Kong who prepared this report.
